EXCURSION.

The Greatest Trip of the Season to Old Point Comfort and the Seashore.

The regular annual excursion to Old Point Comfort in charge of Mr. W. A. Wiggs, T. P. A., will be run Thursday, July, 26th, via C. O. & S. W and C. & O. railways, from Nortonville. Passengers from Earlington can leave on regular train, leaving at 2:08 a. m., connecting with Seashore Special, which leaves L. & N. Union Station at 1:30 p. m. The round trip rate to Old Point Comfort is only $10 and the tickets are good until August 17th, with stop-over privileges returning only.

The trip surpasses any offered the traveling public when you consider the small expense, and the many diversions offered. Grand and beautiful scenery, invigorating mountain air, surf-bathing, ocean voyage, palatial entertainment at the Hygeia Hotel and a visit to the Capital, if desired.

The low rate of $2.50 per day has been secured at the Hygeia for all who go on the special. Every attention and courtesy will be extended to the ladies without escorts. Choice of route between Richmond and Clifton Forge will be given, enabling those who desire to visit Lynchburg, Natural Bridge and other points of interest.

Sleeping car rates will be $4 for berth, Louisville to Old Point, to be occupied by one or two persons, and application for sleeping car space should be made at once to W. A. Wiggs, 253 Fourth Street Louisville, Kentucky. For further particulars address as above or call on agent C. O. & S. W. railway.

Tired Nature's Sweet Restorer.

INSOMNIA, CONSTIPATION AND RHEUMATISM
—CURED WITH THE—ELECTROPOISE.

I am delighted with the Electropoise. It has cured me of rheumatism, insomnia and constipation. Have also found it effective in croup and bilious colic. Nothing would tempt me to part with the little instrument. I sometimes call it "tired nature's sweet restorer." Often when tired after some unusual exertion I use it for an hour, and feel afterward as though I had taken a tonic. Yours truly,

MRS. FRANK LOCKETT
Henderson, Ky.

ST. VITUS' DANCE.

The Electropoise makes the patient dance for joy, that this annoying and serious disease has been cured.

My little girl had an attack of St. Vitus' Dance last year, and by careful attention and medical treatment was relieved, still her health was not good, and the attack returned this spring. We gave the Electropoise a trial, and it gave her great benefit, curing her quickly, and her health is better than usual. We are very much pleased with its effects. Mr. A. R. Jones and his wife have received great benefit from the use of the Electropoise. Yours truly,

C. H. MURPHY,

THERE was no sidereble talk in the city room the first day that Clarence Holt made his appearance there and began his work on the Daily Sensation. He made his entry accompanied by his father, a stockholder in the paper, and the business manager, and was introduced to the city editor.

While they were chatting the oldest reporter in the room, a chronic kicker, growled:

"Well, here comes another favorite to be foisted upon the city men. He'll be a pet, of course; his old man is a stockholder and has got money to burn."

Further controversy and retort was interrupted by the approach of the city editor, who left his desk to introduce Clarence Holt to the members of the staff, who greeted him according to the various dispositions.

Young Holt returned to the editor's desk, and, his father and the business manager having gone, he said to the latest addition to the staff of the Sensation:

"I believe you have had some little experience in writing?"

"I have done no news work, but have written some stories for publication which have been published and paid for."

When he said "paid for" he put a bit of emphesis on the words.

"Then your father first broached the subject of your coming here he gave me some samples of your work to read. Your descriptive powers are very good and you have a keen sense of humor.

"Now what I most need on my staff is a good writer of special articles. Now, if you can produce rapidly and graphically, you can begin your career near the bottom of the ladder, although I shall make some deadly enemies on the staff by giving you the opportunity.

"In the exigency of daily publication you must do rush work, but not poor work. You will not have time or opportunity for re-writing and polishing as the great lights of literature are presumed to lavish on their efforts."

Clarence Holt nodded his head and the editor further said:

"But you have one thing to encourage you, and you can well afford to serve an apprenticeship and stand the eternal grind. It is only a mere matter of time when you will have a paper of your own, and your father is well fixed—he money to burn."

"I've come here to learn the way, and will succeed if it is in me to, but don't you think that to start off you are overestimating my abilities? I would be taken for what I am, and for what I can do. Don't let my father's interest in this paper out any figure with you."

"Oh! Now, what I want you to do is to go to the Olympic theater and interview one of the chorus girls. You must find one who has an interesting life history, something on the romantic."

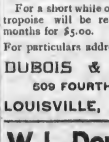
The come opera of "Cupid" had proven a success, and everybody he was to meet was in the best of humor, shaking hands with the others—and himself.

Now it happened that the author of the libretto was a journalist, and he immediately came to the new reporter's rescue with:

"Just hold on a little, while I run around a bit. I've had a heap of experience in this sort of thing and I may be able to help you out."

Pretty soon the author came back and said:

"By Jove, I've found her, and she's as pretty as a peach. The stage manager knows all about her; comes of a good family; once had plenty of money



THE STAGE MANAGER INTRODUCED HER.

—money to burn; haven't got it now. Father dropped it some way. Hang around and I will point her out to you. Why, I have she'll first stately-looking creature. Superb!"

The stage manager brought the young lady forward and introduced her.

"Miss Ethel Allen."

"Mr. Holt, of the Sensation."

Miss Allen and Mr. Holt said something about "pleased to meet" and the success of the opera, and, of course, referred to the weather.

Then stage manager put an end to the talk by calling the next scene, and the rehearsal proceeded rapidly with suggestions from the elite rapidly with suggestions from the elite rapidly with suggestions from the elite

"Old glory shall triumph."

In America live as Americans, that you may die Americans.

Debs dies even harder than did Pendergast.

Pendergast is dead, and Debs end a lot of his class are out of a job.

In 1884, Eugene V. Debs was a democratic member of the Indiana Legislature.

Kentucky has an empty State treasury, and it is no fault of the Republican party either.

The A. R. U. kite, of which Debs was both head and tail, has been pulled down. Thanks to Uncle Sam.

Sovereign's little sideshow to the Debs circus cut a very small figure. Sovereign's big mouth was about all there was in it.

It is a mistaken idea of Gov. Altgeld that his word and act was supreme in the State of Illinois. He is now a wiser if not a better man.

Law-making in Washington, D. C., by the Democratic process, is somewhat of a failure. After so long a time what has been done anyhow? The corpse is almost ready for burial and the day is set to pay the last sad rites,

It is now in order that Markam, Governor of California, first secures Debs' permission to do so, crawl into a hole, a very small hole will do, and when safely in pull the hole in after him. California can have but very little use for its weakneed executive.

Dictator Debs has brought to grief a great many misguided mortals. He guarantee that he, the all powerful, would restore to them their old positions proves worthless. The Debsey-ites have been taught a lesson and should forever profit by it.

It is historically true, as the Minnesota Republicans say in their platform, that "the Republican party took labor from the auction-block and made it honorable;" and it is equally true that the same party has done more to increase the wages and promote the general welfare of the working classes than any other that ever existed.—Globe Democrat.

In Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Biliousness; all Bronchial, Throat, and Lung Affections, even Consumption (or Lung-scrofula) in its earlier stages—if it ever fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

The worse your Catarrh, the more you need Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

A TIMELY SUGGESTION.

In 1895 there will be a campaign for State offices in Kentucky. In nearly every Republican weekly we find an expression of opinion in favor of this or that candidate for Governor. Nothing is said about the balance of the ticket. No man can carry this State for the Republican party. There must be unanimity of purpose or the canvass will result, as it has in the past, in the defeat of the ticket.

In a State where there is such a Democratic majority as in Kentucky, the nominees for minor places on the Republican ticket ought to be selected with as much consideration as we give the head of the ticket. There is a sufficiency of good material on hand, but the trouble is, as it always has been, to bring it to the front. There is no danger that our leader will not be a first-class man, but the sides-de-camp should be fully as worthy for their posts as the commander-in-chief.

It has been suggested by friends of one of the leading candidates that the names of the various aspirants for political honors be put in a hat and drawn out one at a time, the first one to run for Governor, Secretary of State, and so on down the line. This sounds well enough, but there are objections to it. It would be better for the convention to decide in the old way, by balleting, who is to be the leader. Then take the strongest man in sight for the next place, and continue on this line until the entire ticket has been filled with the best material in the State. The primary object ought to be the success of the party, not the advancement of individuals in order that they may control the Federal patronage in the event of the election of a Republican President 1896.

The Leader proposes to take no sides in this contest. It matters little to it, as a party newspaper, who the nominee may be. The Republicans of Kentucky must make a winning fight to redeem the old Commonwealth, and the times are ripe for the venture. Let us lay aside petty animosities; let principle prevail over personal prejudice; put a full ticket in field of the best and most influential men in the party, make a thorough canvass; appeal to the reason and intellect of the voter, and whatever be the result, we will have the satisfaction of having done well our part.—Lexington Leader.

CLERICAL SYMPATHIZERS.

The Rev. Geo. D. McCulloch, pastor of the Glasgow Avenue Presbyterian Church, St. Louis, Mo., takes occasion in the course of his sermon on Sunday, July 8th, to take sides with the strikers, and after giving a description of the town of Pullman and statistics showing the capacity of the works, condemns the plan of co-operation, the benefit of which alliance, he says, comes not to the whole people, but to one man; and states that the tenants of the Pullman dwellings are charged $2.25 per thousand feet for gas which costs the Pullman but 33 cents and 10 cents per 1,000 gallons for water, which costs the company but 4 cents, and much more in the same strain. All of which is quoted without giving authority or giving any redeeming feature on the other side.

If he had been as zealous to hunt for evidence that the Pullman company might have some reasonable defence for their present scale of wages and that their treatment of their employees might not be so brutal as stated, as he seems to have been in collecting statistics to uphold the course of the strikers, he could have read in the current issue of the "Railway Age" a speech which Mr. Pullman made to a committee of his workmen on May 7th, in which he mentions the items of gas and water as furnished to his tenants in such a plain way as to contradict the Rev. McCulloch's information.

To show how reckless people are in making statements, I will instance that of McLally in his interview with the Board of Trade of St. Louis, when in answer to McMilligan's questions, he said that Mr. Pullman owned the water works and gas light, and each and every man is forced, of course, to live in Pullman houses, burn Pullman gas, drink Pullman water and trade at the Pullman store. Yet it seems from the statement of Mr. Pullman to his committee, which, by the way, was not challenged by any of them that the company is paying the city $300 per month more for water for the use of their tenants than they receive, and that while there are 1,200 tenements of varying sizes in the town of Pullman, there are nearly 800 employees who own their own houses, in the immediate vicinity. And an Act of the Legislature of the State of Illinois approved May 28, 1891, prohibits "truck" stores and deductions from wages of anything but lawful money. Mr. Pullman told the committee, also, that in order to increase the number of employees, who, on account of the business depression had been reduced to only 2,000 in November 1893, he made such low bids for car contracts as to secure them from competing companies, and thereby sustained great loss, but raised the number of employees by May 1st, to 4,200. That on fifty-five Long Island cars he had lost $16,500. On 550 steel cars, built for the Northwestern there would be a loss of $60,600—and on twenty five cars built for the Lake Street Elevated, the loss would be $1,975; and that in making these estimates no account had been made of interest on capital or machinery.

Now neither the committee nor any of the car manufacturing companies who failed to procure the contracts for the cars mentioned have attempted to show that Mr. Pullman's statements were untrue. Mr. Lally says "they (the Pullman Company) can report what they please, but we do not believe that they are doing business at a loss."

When the investigation by the Congressional Committee, of the Homestead strike, took place, the whole country was enlightened and surprised at the seemingly exhorbitant wages that were being paid. It may be that when these labor troubles are settled sufficiently to to have trade and business resumed and conducted in the usual manner the search light of unprejudiced inquiry may be turned on the Pullman Company and its competitors so that the public may learn how much less the Pullman car workers are paid than their competing workman, and how much worse their condition is. It has been stated as a noteworthy fact and it is yet without contradiction that at the beginning of the strike the Pullman Savings Bank, had on deposit nearly $488,000, of which nine-tenths, or $450.000, belonged to the employees at Pullman. This too was after the cut in wages in 1893, and while according to strike leader Lally, of St. Louis, the workmen received only two or three cents per month over and above what was deducted (contrary to the statute) from their pay rolls, for rents, gas, water, store bills, etc. That such oppression should exist and such thrift occur under the same regime seems incredible. And to criticise without knowing the facts in the case, to attempt upon the heresy evidence of irresponsible strikers, to condemn a corporation for lowering its wages to meet the changed condition of business, and at the same time when red-handed anarchy presumes to defy and dictate terms to the constitutional authorities, and continues to conspire against public prosperity, is really to give both encouragement and assistance to the revolutionists. All these minor questions of work and wages are now of little moment until the question of submission to the law is settled. Instead of bringing influence to bear on Pullman to induce him to arbitrate let every patriotic citizen, without reference to creed, party or order stand shoulder to shoulder in support of each other to uphold the government in crashing organized anarchy. There will be time enough to investigate Pullman when order is restored.

National Capital.

[From Our Regular Correspondent.]

Washington, July 17, 1894.

The tariff bill--nobody calls it the Wilson bill any more—has at last gone to conference, where it will be subject to agitation and irritation for two weeks or more. If, when it returns, with the approval of the conferences, it is unlike the Wilson bill, the chances are that it will be much more unlike the bill passed by the Senate. The debate over the reference of the measure to conference was, for the most part, very tame. Mr. Wilson made a strong presentation of the situation, earnestly defending the original House bill, and insisting upon the duty of the House to resist the Senate amendments. Mr. Reed made a very brief speech, devoted chiefly to facetiousness, and then the debate lagged.

It is understood that Chairman Wilson's confident bearing in his defense of the House tariff bill as against the amendments of the Senate, rested upon substantial encouragement, aside from the staunch spirit of opposition among the House Democrats. The President is said to have expressed himself in direct terms as opposed to many of the Senate amendments and as favoring a course on the part of the House conferees of courageous action in an effort to restore the measure to the form in which it left the House or as nearly so as possible. Before any steps were taken in the House in regard to the bill after the Senate finished its work, the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee and the President are said to have had a conference in which the latter explained his views quite freely.

Sunday was a busy day at the White House. All day long conferences were held between the President and his official advisers. Secretary Lamont and Gen. Schofield came early and remained late, while Postmaster-General Bissell, Secretary Gresham, and Secretary Carlisle spent sometime with Mr. Cleveland. It was altogether a red letter Sunday at the White House, and the waiting carriages and constant comings and goings of officers of the government made it obvious that something unusual was taking place. The president's office looked like the headquarters of a general directing the movements of his army. Telegrams fresh from the hands of the White House operator were brought in frequently and carefully read. Maj. Gen. Schofield offered suggestions and told about the distribution of troops in Chicago. Adjt. Gen. Ruggles was also present to furnish any information about the army. People going to and coming from church did not need to be told that the pulse of the great strike was being felt in the White House.

The statement has been published that an effort is to be made to discipline Mr. Hill for his conduct in voting against the tariff bill, and that the action would extend to the point of calling a caucus and reading him out of the party. Yesterday a democratic Senator, whose connection with the caucus is of the most prominent character, said that there was absolutely nothing in the report, and that neither Mr. Hill nor any other Democrat who exercised the privilege of fighting the tariff bill would be called before his colleagues for criticism and punishment.

"Who is the handsomest man in the Senate?" was the conundrum put in a party of legislators the the other day. That depends if one is looking for a military style of beauty—the rotund figure, the formidable mustache, and the martial eye--Senator Manderson would undoubtedly carry off the palm. But this is only one style of comeliness. There is the Napoleon cast of countenance—the deep set and commanding eye, and the stern features--which would give Senator Allen, of Nebraska the prize. If the flowing side-whisker be a sign of pulchritude, the Senator Blanchard, of Louisana, would stand away up in front, while if the taste of the beauty judge should run to an abundance of hirsute adornment, no would be in it with Peffer or Dolph or Stewart. Senator Vest's beauty is of a rugged, Pike county style, that must have its admirers in the West. Senator Cameron unfortunately mars the delicate outline of his countenance by wearing a blue and white shirt with the stripes an inch broad, and Senator Call is out of the race since the episode of the socks. But, as a matter of fact, there really has not been a completely handsome man in the Senate since Mr. Hancock retired to public life. He was Hyperion himself.

During these somewhat troublous times it is a pleasure to turn to the office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and observe the handsome increase in government receipts. The receipts of this office now average over one million dollars per day. The anticipation of the increased tax on spirits has resulted in this tremendous increase in receipts during the past week. On the whole the situation in the Internal Revenue department of the government is in the most gratifying condition.

Now that the legislative road is clear of the tariff incumbrance, an effort is making to secure a day in the Senate for the consideration of the Chinese treaty, which has been hanging fire for a long time.

Secretary Carlisle was out yesterday for the first time since his recent sickness. He called at the White House and subsequently paid a visit to the Treasury Department.

No one can afford to stay at home during the warm weather when he can get to the coast and enjoy the cool ocean breeze with the Old Point Comfort excursion party for so small a cost.

Home And Abroad.

It is the duty of everyone, whether at home or traveling for pleasure or business, to equip himself with the remedy which will keep up strength and prevent illness, and cure such ills as are liable to come upon all in every day life. Hood's Sarsaparilla keeps the blood pure and less liable to absorb the germs of disease.

Hood's Pills are hand made, and perfect in proportion and appearance. 25c per box.

Locomotive Blasts.

We here publish some good comments on Debs, made by the Press:

According to all reports, Debs has had the fim-jams more than once, but he never had 'em as bad as within the past two weeks. But he will be cured of this attack very soon.

The next time Debs wants to strike he will probably know enough to tackle something near his size. The Government of the United States is considerably too much for him.

The Coxeyites, who are still on the march—and there are some who yet dodge the tool killer—are applauding the strike. They have no use for railroads.

Very likely Debs thought the United States Government was just fooling, but he will recover from any such flimsy delusion as that

The less the labor unions respect the orders of Debs, the more the country will respect the labor unions.

If the railway strikers bore up all the cars there will be no work left for them to return to.

It is a blessed thing for the country that the railroad managers are getting able to run their own business, regardless of what Dictator Debs or any of his gang may say.

The business on this division was resumed in full last Thursday the 12th of July, and therefore every body is happy except those who threw up the sponge and refused to work when called upon by the company.

The eight telegraph offices at Crofton and Sebree were reopened last week.

During the late Deb's strike our Master of Trains was an overworked man going both night and day, but you can rest assured that he is not only a stayer but a fighter for right to the finish.

When men quit work without provocation or reason, how can they expect a company to give them employment in preference to one they have grounds to believe will remain faithfully at his post of duty.

Perhaps the boys who were so eager to flock into the A. R. U. with they had not done so, since the organization has proven so obnoxious to railroad companies and the public generally.

Heretofore one of the things to be regretted is the failure of some railroads to stand by the men who helped them in the hour of need, and it remains to be seen whether or not they will act differently this time. A man who has shown the courage to work in the face of threats should be given regular employment and thus encouraged in the stand for right he has taken.

If a man could guarantee you a better job at better wages than you might afford to quit your present one, but when a man like Deb's has nothing to offer, but idleness, are you not almost committing suicide when attention is paid to his call and you throw up your position. You may sympathize with Deb's and his cause, but the minute you step down and out, you lose the sympathy of your merchant, miller and all men without whom you can not well get along.

To an outsider, one would have thought that Chicago, during the riots of the last few weeks, was in a very bad condition, but read what the Chicago Record says about it:

"The events of the last few days have occasioned some strange scenes in Chicago, and not the least singular of these lies in the sharp contrast between the regular spectacles of a large city's life, and the presence of the military element. Notwithstanding various thrilling rumors of a reign of terror in Chicago, the district in which there are any open signs of an unusual disturbance of public conditions is confined in limited areas. Nearly in the heart of the troubled region, where the railroad tracks are patrolled by pickets and scenes of riot have occurred, life goes on outwardly quite in the usual manner. Stores are open, women go out shopping and children play in the streets. The atmosphere however lies surcharged with nervous excitement than is that in the heart of the city.

But the curious thing in the business district, where there have been absolutely no riot scenes whatever, is the contrast already noted between civil and military life. The spectacle on Michigan Avenue, for instance, could only be looked for in Chicago, and then only in extraordinary conditions. A military encampment, with regular soldiers in fatigue costume and sentries pacing up and down, lies directly across the street from some of the most palatial hostelries in the world. The pickets patrolling the eastern side of the avenue can look into the windows of a hotel 200 feet away and see people in the evening dress eating the most elaborate dinners. On one side of the street there is the rough-and-ready sort of privernder and the hardlife of troops in the field. On the other there are champagne suppers and the social refinements known to wealth and fashion. And between the two sides there rolls a line of handsome equipages, the occupants of which could not get out and walk in two paces to the east without being called to a halt by an armed picket. A scene of much the same nature has been put on exhibition on the little lawn plot surrounding the post-office building, where another military encampment lies hedged around by business blocks and all the signs of peaceable animation which mark Chicago's business portion."

It is decidedly a queer spectacle that is afforded in the mixture of civilian and military scenes. The two elements are grotesquely incompatable One looking at the soldiers wonders how it happens that business can be going on. And looking at the peaceful proceedings of the surrounding civil life he wonders how it happens that brigades of armed troops are camped on the spot

Disease Threatens to Cut Short a Noble Career

But Hood's Sarsaparilla Restores Good Health.

Lillie May Bentley is an accomplished elocutionist and natural born speaker of only 15 years of age. She is the only child temperance lecturer before the public. Her genius, however, did not exempt her from an attack of a disease of the blood. Her own words best tell the story:

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"I heartily join with the many thousands that are recommending Hood's Sarsaparilla. I had been troubled from infancy with gatherings in the head. I was compelled to leave school upon the doctor's advice. He thought it was the only thing to save my life, but I

Continued to Grow Worse.

I was persuaded finally by a friend to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. The use of one bottle acted almost like magic upon the blood and I began to improve. After the use of three bottles the gathering ceased and I am rosier of my former trouble. I owe my life and will always remain a true friend to Hood's Sarsaparilla. Down in the Mines.

The shipment of coal has again been resumed and the market at present is good for the shipping of coal to St. Louis.

M. E. Dan Umstead, and o crew of men, have been making some repairs on the mine engine at St. Charles.

Ed F. Robinson has been doing some surveying for the St. Bernard Coal Company. Ed is showing considerable ability in that line.

The railroad strike, it is said, made coal quite scarce in some of the northern cities, and for a while a coal famine was threatened.

The miners lost several days work, last week on account of the railroads being unable to move the loaded cars of coal, but from now on they will have very little leisure.

At this time there is said to be about eighty thousand miners idle in the United States, as a result in part of the late strike. Thousands of these will perhaps never again resume work in the mines on account of the use of violence during the trouble.

During the last few months the fact has been revealed that a bad leader is a curse to his followers. Just look at the position McBride has placed the Miner's Association in. Not only the operators but a large number of its own members have lost confidence in it.

No doubt the railroad company does, and justly should, feel under many obligations to Mr. J. B. Atkinson, president of the St. Bernard Coal Co., for the active and influential part he took in seeing that trains did move at this point without molestation, and with a full and well qualified crew of men.

It is an old and true saying, a burnt child dreads the fire. Therefore McBride, president of the Miner's Union, will not be called upon to again call out the miners, refused to do so. The truth of the matter is that dictator McBride has lost his influence over the organization he once had, and it is very doubtful if he should now issue a strike order, if one tenth of the men would obey it. The majority of them have long ago seen the folly of taking the advice of a paid agitator of trouble, and from now on, will, in most cases, be their own judge of what is to the interest of themselves and families.

One of the good results of the late miner's strike is that in many places the operators will be able to get rid of the clan that seems to have been placed here on earth to continually create trouble, if we can judge from their actions:

"The pretense is still made of keeping up a strike in the Connellsville coke regions. It seems to be of very little consequence to any but the men themselves, however. At a meeting on Monday they were advised by their leaders to keep it up, although in many instances their families are being evicted from their homes, and operators are steadily bringing in new men to take their places. It cannot be very long before there will be no room for any of the strikers, and after more than three months of idleness, during a large portion of which they have terrorized the whole coke region, they will be compelled to find employment elsewhere."

A writer to the New York Tribune, has, in asking that paper to discuss "boycotte and strikes," brought out some good points, which we quote here as I refer it as a mistaken theory for the reason that my observation for the last fifty years leads me to say that labor is ever a friend as "organized capital" does. I mean since the very same organized capital which thousands of workingmen are constantly denouncing as oppressive tyranny, and which they are fighting under cover of trades unions by means of strikes and boycotts, has been and is the means of giving these same workingmen from two to three times as much wages as they would or could have received if this organized capital did not exist and had not done its work.

If will give one illustration, which, I believe, is similar to others existing all over the country. When I began the practice of law, in 1854, the counties of Morgan, Scott and Campbell embraced a part of my circuit. These counties now embrace the richest and best part of East Tennessee's "great coal field." Then only a few tons of coal were mined and were used in blacksmith shops. The mode of transportation at that time was the common road wagon, except that lastboats were used in high water on Poplar Creek, Emory and Clinch rivers. Then the laborers of a large number of the present corps of miners—in fact, many of the old ones now engaged in mining—earned their living on small mountain farms. They supplemented the scanty yield of the soil by hunting and trapping if feet very sure that the average gross receipts of the workingmen in that entire section of country did not exceed one hundred dollars per annum for each able-bodied man. Then, too, most of their apparel was the product of the hand spinning wheel and the hand loom.

Now, by an expenditure of some $80,000,000 the Cincinnati and Southern railroad passes through two of these counties. An expenditure of $2,000,000 more of that same kind of organized capital has carried the Knoxville and Ohio railroad through the ether county. Not less than $3,000,000 more has been invested in opening the several coal mines. These investments of $25,000,000 of "organized capital" have done what for the laboring men of these three mountain counties? They have enabled every able-bodied man who is willing to work to receive gross earnings each year averaging not less than $450. They have brought close in the doors of these men their home, kitchen and clothing goods at less than half the cost paid for such articles in 1854.

Does it not follow that this invested capital has been, is, and will continue to be, worth to each laboring man in that entire section of this country a gain of not less than $300 each year? In many instances his gain will reach $400 or more. I mean he can realize now for his work that much more than he could possibly realize in 1854. Why? For this reason. Let the wheels of those railroads stand still, and every coal mine must close, except for the very small output which can be hauled away in road wagons. The miners and employes of the roads, instead of their present $1 50 and upward, would be compelled to go back to their small fields of larger acres of poor, sandy lands, which at the very best would not yield them a net income of over $100 per annum In most cases they could not get more than half that amount from their farms. But that would be only a part of the loss.

Some Lodge-ical Conclusions. The members of E. W. Turner Lodge, No. 548, have been making improvements in their lodge room during the past week. A reception room has been fitted up and partition walls deadened, and a new goat ordered. Ernest Stokes presided over the tracing board and manipulated the working tools, and under his magical touch order has sprung out of chaos. This lodge is always "in the swim" and is at present laying like a green flourish tree.

Some Extraordinary Citizens. The following list of citizens have, since our last issue, sought Judge Cowell and plead guilty of handling "thumb papers," and cracked down on X with Lincoln's picture on it, or gave ample assurance that they would speedily do so. Taken from the docket the names run as follows: Will Stockings, Lum Vincent, B F Farrow, George Rhodes, Lee Crabtree, Bud Ford. In addition to their generous contributions to the exchequer the liberal-minded gantlemen also "antied" up the usual allotment of lubricant for the running gear of justice.

Two Lives Saved. Mrs. Phebe Lee, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had Consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her, and see says it saved her life. Mr. Thomas Eggers, 239 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold approaching Consumption, tried without result everything else than bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. Ha is naturally thankful, fi is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in Coughs and Colds. Free trial bottles at St. Bernard Drug Store. Large size 50c. and $1on.

He Works In Long Division. The trial of Louis Ratliffe, charged with attempted rape upon the person of Lizzie Osborn, occupied the afternoon session of Squire Priest's court last Saturday. The charge was sustained to breach of the peace, and was handed over to Judge Cowell, who, in view of the aggravating nature of this offence, imposed a fine of fifty dollars and costs. This amount Louis proposes to liquidate fracturing limestone upon the streets, working three days in each week, the remaining three days being devoted to his avocations. A violation of this arrangement subjects him to a constant sojourn upon the "donnick" heap.

$100 Reward, $100. The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials

A Crying Need at This Time. The great and crying need at this immediate vicinity at present, seems to be a good, "wet" rain to moisten the "dry" dust. Scientists tell us, however, that dust is a very important factor in almost every phenomenon of the earth's atmosphere, and it might appear, at first glance, that the part played by dust particles in Nature is of no great scientific or general interest; so a matter of fact, however, they play a very important role. In the first place it is due to the dust that the heavens are blue. Light traverses all gases, no matter what their chemical compositions, in straight lines, and is invisible. The dust intercepts and reflects it on all sides, and makes the whole atmosphere luminous in the same manner as it makes the track of the sun's rays visible in a darkened room. Without dust there would be no blue firmament; the heaven would be blacker than we see it on moonless nights. Notwithstanding the very lucid explanation science is able to give as regarding the usefulness of "dust," we prefer a little of that ingredient the "horny-handed son's of toil" are pleased to call "mud," just now, and all vegetation is crying out for the "bitter rain."

Mammoth Cave. The extent of this, the greatest of known caverns, —according the figures given by a State geological survey,—is estimated at hundreds of acres, through which wind two hundred and twenty-three avenues, with an aggregate length of from one hundred and fifty to two hundred miles, and diversified by forty-seven domes, twenty-three pits, eight waterfalls, and several bodies of water, of which three are termed rivers, two are nominally lakes, and one a sea. The avenues average twenty-one feet, twelve million cubic yards of limestone have been displaced in their formation. The cave has five levels, the upper tiers being remarkably dry, while the drainage level, and consequent lowest depth, is placed at three hundred and twenty-eight feet below the surface.

Everybody should embrace the opportunity afforded by the Excursion to Mammoth Cave, to be run by the C. O. & S. W. R. R., August 16th, at Hard Times Prices. Excursion tickets including transportation to the Cave and return, trips through the Long and Short Routes and one, and one quarter days' board at the Mammoth Cave Hotel will be sold at the low rate of $13.50 from Nortonville.

For farther information and illustrated pamphlet of Mammoth Cave write or call on any agent of the C. O. & S. W. R. R.

Last Jan, Dick Crawford brought his twelve months old child, suffering from infantile diarrhoea, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and being sickly everything ran though it like water through a sieve. I gave it the usual treatment in such cases but without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used, a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny appearance disappeared and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this Remedy. J T Marlow, M. D., Symsonia, Ill. AN AMERICAN.

BY DIFFIELD OF HORNE.

He was a long, lank, ungainly-looking chap, with a thin face, a shock of sandy hair, very bright eyes, and an indefinite suggestion of phrsical strength and mental assurance. The sheriff of Schuyler County, Illinois, had called for extra deputies to repress the lawless mobs of strikers that were dominating the State in general and Schwerts County in particular; and I, Sara Hawkins, of Connecticut, had presented himself with an old army musket of about the 1860 pattern on his shoulder.

Sheriff Mangam glanced at the recruit. "Here's another this man in," he called to a clerk at a neighboring desk. Sheriff Mangam seemed bored and unhappy.

"Hold on a minute, there," drawled Ezra. "I s'pose ther' ain't no objections to a little confish 'tote enlistin', is there?

The sheriff looked even more annoyed. "Well?" he said, "I thought you wanted to be sworn in? We need men and arms."

"Mebbe I do, an' mebbe I don't. What I was a-goin' to ask was jest what sort of a job I was engagin' for. Th'aint no sense in jumpin' inter things blind."

"You engage to obey my orders in putting down lawlessness," said the sheriff, curtly.

"Yes; a-course. That's jest it; but what I'm a-gettin' at is jest how yer a-goin ter flew it."

"What do you mean? That's my business."

"Cert'inly, cert'inly," said Ezra, apologetically; 'an' t reckon it's my business whether I'm goin' to help or not."

The sheriff wanted men and guns badly, for the Governor had been criticising him, so he smoothed out his rumpled dignity, while Ezra continued

"Ya see, if ye rally be a-goin' ter have the laws obeyed, an' put down the chaps what's breakin' um, me an' Moli Thunder is with yer; but if yer call'ate ter stand an up ter be a-stoned as' shot at an' slugged while you're a-readin' of the riot act an' callin on the 'citizens' citizens what's stonin' us to disperse, I guess I don't hankar after the job."

The sheriff looked aghast, but Ezra went right on:

"I've bin a-readin' 'bout these strikes, an' it kinder seems ter me 'sif the sheriff, an' millshy was a-tarnal sight too tender o' them fellers, an' let um take away their guns an' things an' dew 'most anything they want ter. Now I'd sorter hate ter see Moli Thunder, a mutter-bild man as he McClellan carried her all through the Peninselar Ye see, she's a sorter family heirloom, an' I reckon it 'd kinder hurt her feelin's if she was give up 'thout ever bein' shot off."

"We must not forget that the men who are on strike are our misguided fellow citizens," said the sheriff

"So was the rebs," said Ezra. Then he added. "I s'pose you mean they're stonin'?"

The sheriff flushed, but he was still conciliatory, and, besides, he now felt it necessary to relieve his mind of a few epigrams of wealthy mine-owners and soulless corporations.

"This is no tyrannical monarchy," he said. "We don't shoot down citizens of a free country except in cases of the direst necessity."

"I used ter think it was a free country," said Ezra, reflectively; "but when I'm down in all the time of mobs a-bustin' railroads, so' bernin' an' blowin' up property, an' bestin' an hillin' men jest 'cause they wouldn't work fer what the boss call a livin', I'm not so dewgawned sure whether it's free or not—ceptin' for these yere labor leaders an' agitators, what I'm sure is free shootin' till it's necessary, mebbe you'll be so good as ter tell me when you call necessary. Strikes me it's bin pretty darn necessary fer 'bout two weeks back, if we're a-goin' ter have any free country left."

The sheriff felt somehow that he wasn't giving quite so much reproof as he was getting.

"Perhaps you don't know," he said, stiffly, "that I called on the Governor for troops a week ago, and he replied that I must first exhaust my own power."

Ezra leaned forward, and his eyes shone as he drawled:

"I wos jest a-thinkin' that there's where the trouble is. Your un' the Gawv'ner's powers was both pert much exhausted ter start with by fear of losin' votes next 'lection, an' ye're each bin tryin' tar shove yer doody on the other. Now look a here. What I'm a-comin' tew is 'frou want a man ter stand round an' pertend preserve law a-'ordor 'bout doin' a-'ider or harrin law-breakers, I guess yer don't want me none. I'm willin' ter be free citizen in a busy howlin' up mines an' poundin' honest workin' men tar death, it's mor'n likely Moll Thunder'll go off an' blow the hull bed off some peaceable law abidin' spectator in the front rank er the mob."

"You'd get me and yourself indicted for murdur!" exclaimed the horified sheriff.

"I guess likely," said Ezra, calmly. "That's what happens when there's a district 'terney round who wants ter run for pedge—an' most of um dew."

"Then I won't get you to help you," said the sheriff, at last losing patience, even though he lost a vote with it. "I'm going to run my business, and you can either swear in or get out."

With flushed face he proceeded to busy himself rather ostentatiously about other matters. Ezra stood near the door and thought hard. At last he shouldered the old gun.

"I guess ill go up an' get a job in the mine," he said. "I s'pose a nateriss can defend himself I'a tarnal former tries ter kill him for workin', can't he?"

The sheriff vouchsafed no answer, and Ezra Hawkins went swinging up the dusty road with the "Principels; musket" over his shoulder. There was a look on his face that made the Polish and Hungarian pickets lower their clubs and let him pass on toward the beleaguered property.

"It will do it!"

"It will do it!" protested an American brother of the family that had long been afflicted with a case of consumption. Reference was had to Dr. Pierce's Golden Relief. Doubt had been expressed that it would cure consumption. The protesting member had witnessed the invalid, the frequent visits of the Doctor, and had accompanied the "trips South." Had noticed the "hectic flush," the "nervous irritation," the "constant cough," the "profuse expectoration."

He had also seen the discontinuance of all these—the administration of Dr. Pierce's Golden Relief, followed by the restoration to perfect health, and he knew the Golden Relief was what had done it. He was honest and fearless enough to "tell the truth." Cures also sorethroat, bronchitis, colds, dysentery, bruises, burns, cuts and all sores—in fact, inflammation in any form or place from a sorn to a consumption. No inflammation no sorn, no inflammation no consumption. One tablespoonful does cures La Grippe. Never disappoints. If satisfaction not given, money refunded. Take a bottle home to-day.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA
The only
Admitted at the WORLD'S FAIR
of CHICAGO
1893

Why Was It

that Ayer's Sarsaparilla, out of the great number of similar preparations manufactured throughout the world, was the only medicine of its kind admitted at the World's Fair, Chicago? And why was it that, in spite of the united efforts of the manufacturers of other preparations, the decision of the World's Fair Directors was not reversed?

BECAUSE

According to RULE 15—"Articles that are in any way dangerous or offensive, also patent medicines, nostrums, and empirical preparations, whose ingredients are concealed, will not be admitted on the Exposition," and, therefore—

Because Ayer's Sarsaparilla is not a patent medicine, not a nostrum, and not a secret preparation;

Because its proprietors had nothing to conceal and were ambitious as to the formula from which it is compounded;

Because it is all that it is claimed to be—a Compound Concentrated Extract of Sarsaparilla, and in every way worthy of the indorsement of this most important committee, called together for passing upon the manufactured products of the entire world.

Ayer's The only Sarsaparilla

ARE WE SAXON OR ROMAN?

The British and American Type of Character Is Roman.

A narrow sectarianism and a meager view of ethnological influence closed the British mind to the abundant proofs that Roman blood had determined the quality of the British race before any Angles, Danes, Saxons, or Normans ever landed on the shores of Britain. The Romans had held sway in Britain before the fall of Rome for upward of four centuries, between B. C. 43 and A. D. 410. This is longer than the period which has elapsed since the discovery of America by Columbus. In a single campaign of the earliest period of Roman conquest sixty thousand lives had been lost in fighting the tattooed Britons. There is no evidence that one-sixth as many Angles ever entered the country, and had the whole Angle tribe come, men, women and children, it could not have mustered so many. The Romanized England with farms until, on one occasion, the great City of Rome (then of two million, three hundred thousand inhabitants) was rescued from famine by importations of wheat from Britain. Roman roads bound together all the cities and towns of England, and extended far up into Scotland. The Saxons, and later the Angles, came in allies, and not as invaders. Their number cannot be known.

Britain had been drained of many of its Roman troops in the campaigns in aid of Maximus and in the conquest of Bretagne in Gaul. But it was never overrun like Spain, Germany and Italy, by the barbarian tribes of Goths, Huns, Vandals, or Visigoths. In no part of Europe were the chances so good of preserving the Roman blood in so large a measure. From the Saxons, Angles and Danes the English blood may have drawn saving, trading and pleading qualities. From the original tattooing Britons, Silures or Welsh, Picts and Gaels, they derived endurance and toughness under defeat. But how could they escape deriving from four centuries of Roman admixture those dominating and legislative forces which make the modern British race successors to the ancient Rome?

How little Gladstone's features differ from Cicero's or those of Victor Hugo from the bust of Homer! The face of the most distinguished Gen. von Moltke is a close production to that of Julius Cæsar; yet it is not one whit more purely Roman than that of a typical American lawyer and senator, Lyman Trumbull, of Illinois. The English and Americans become, on a little investigation, more clearly the countrymen of Cato, Cæsar, Augustus, Galileo, Columbus and Napoleon than thousands of those who were born within the sound of the Tiber; but of Immigrant blood from Sicily, Lydia, Egypt, or Thrace. The British and American type of character is not Anglo-Saxon. It did not originate on the Elbe; it derives its strongest traits from that race which has been the most forceful and masterful for thirty centuries.—Social Economist.

TRIALS OF A LONE DUCK.

Compelled to Fight Murderous Toy Ships—His Victory.

The children up at the pond at Seventy-sixth street, on the east side of the park, have great fun with the solitary duck inhabitant. This duck has none of the shyness of the squirrels. He is a bold and brazen bird, and will make futile attempts to climb up the perpendicular stonework surrounding the pond in the hope of finding a cracker.

Crackers are his chief article of diet. Not ordinary crackers, but fancy ones in queer shapes at twenty-five cents a pound. Rich children, who are bored to death by the necessity of looking after their French nursemaids, come to the pond every morning for the purpose of fattening that duck on sweet crackers.

They stand on the brink and shout "Dutty, dutty; tum an' det a tratter," and every few minutes one of them falls in.

The duck doesn't let this disturb him, however. His mind and soul are on crackers, sweet crackers in animal shapes preferred, but in the absence of these he'll eat anything from bread crust to doughnuts.

Undoubtedly he would soon grow so fat that he couldn't paddle but for the enforced exercise he gets every afternoon. Then children of a larger growth come and set toy ships when there is wind, and if there is one thing that the duck dreads more than another it is a toy ship.

No sooner is one set in the water than, squawking, quacking and flapping his wings, he flees to the uttermost corner only to find another there, perhaps.

His afternoons are one wretched succession of wild twistings and turnings and divings.

One day last week, having been herded in a corner by three boats, he dived and came up outside the blockade, only to find a miniature schooner bearing down on him.

With a squawk of dismay he swerved, and a sloop on the other tack took him squarely amidships.

Down he dived deep, stayed there for a few seconds and just as his head came out of the water a big sloop bumped into him. Then there was a trouble! existed.

His duckship arose, and then there was wrath in his quack. With his bill he seized the bowsprit of the sloop and pulled it down under the water.

Then he grabbed the jib, tore it off, tackled the mainsail and ripped it up the middle, and with a whole lot towards the stern and a big wing over the stern and a peck at the boat over.

Flushed with triumph he proceeded leisurely to demolish the riggings and all else breakable or tearable, while from the bank the walls of the shipowners were wafted afar on the air.—N. Y. Sun.

Palestrina was plagued by poverty all his life. His compositions are almost numberless, many of them still remaining in manuscript in the Vatican library, but in spite of the marvels he wrought in church music he barely managed to make a living for himself and family as conductor of the pope's choir.

HERESY OF THE DEMOCRATS.

Disastrous Consequences of Placing Wool on the Free List.

The democratic contention is that with wool on the free list we would have cheaper woolen clothing. If this were true it might be worth serious consideration even though it should ruin our sheep industry.

The whole history of the doctrine and the practical effect of the doctrine of protection afford conclusive answers to this heresy. And the very fact that all kinds of woolen clothing are to day infinitely cheaper in this country than they were prior to the levying of the McKinley tariff on wool in 1890 ought, in and of itself, to be a sufficient answer to this argument. But the real answer is to be found in the logical economic definition which must inevitably follow and which invariably does follow in the wake of a policy which subordinates the great wool industry of this country to that of the foreign producers of wool. Whether in Australia, the Argentine republic, the South Sea Islands, or elsewhere.

Destroy, practically the sheep industry of this country, as must inevitably be the case by placing wool on the free list, and we are at once, or at least in a comparatively short space of time, placed at the mercy of the producers of foreign wool. Then, indeed, of importing these hundred million pounds of wool, as now, we would be compelled to import double that amount to meet our demand.—Jackson Sumption.

It is not apparent to every intelligent mind that so soon as this state of things is accomplished the price of foreign wool, even in the absence of the formation of a corner in it, will be advanced to figures largely beyond that now paid for American wools? And who, further, does not know or realize that then, there being no check of home production, the American market will be under the absolute control of the importers of the few men who control the foreign flocks, and the result will be the formation of a great foreign wool trust by which the price of wool will be largely advanced, and then not only the American manufacturer, but the mass of the American people who wear woolen cloth will feel the fearful consequences of free trade in wool?

But this is not all. This is only a part of the dreadful results of such an economic policy. This large excess in wool imports would annually drain our country of more than sixty million dollars in gold for wool and woolen goods, and with this inexhaustible drain of affairs in our commercial and economic relations shall be wrought out under the policy involved in the peculiar bill, while it will bear heavily on all classes throughout the whole country, it will fall on the people, the manufacturers, the producers as well as the consumers of our country who will suffer. It will be a death blow to the woolen manufacturing industries, it will increase the price of woolen clothing to our people. It will destroy and take from our people one source of cheap, nutritious food. It will destroy and break down various other industries of different kinds dependent on the sheep industry.

LOOKED LIKE A JORN DUKE.

A Nobleman by Parentage, Who Made His Money in Cheese.

"The amateur traveler, as his friends call him, was in a meditative frame of mind, and everyone knew that over the second cup of his coffee which followed his dinner he was thinking of some foreign law. By the mysterious principle of thought transference which everybody knows nothing about, a Tribune man asked, "Did you ever see a live duke at home?"

"Yes," he said, "I was just thinking about one duke I saw. I had driven out from Palermo to the races at La Favorita. We are in an amphitheater of great mountains the Sicilian nobility had gathered to see some bad racing. It was one of the most beautiful spots on earth. The great mountains hemmed about a level plane, and it seemed to grand for horse racing. But, then, it was not real racing, you know, only a weak imitation, which really did not detract from the sublimity of the place, but gave people an excuse for being there. We were driving back after the races through the Corso, where up and down the Sicilian great men passed one another, when, seeing me through the broadway. I saw a carriage, the panels of which blazed with armorial bearings. It was of an ancient and most respectable make and was drawn by four white horses on two of which were postilions in liveries of blue and silver. On the box, with folded arms, sat two footmen in the same livery, and on the forehead behind were two more, all four with cocked hats and white, curling wigs.

"On the blue velvet cushions of the carriage reclined an old man with snow-white imperial and mustache. He was livery of face and figure, and when beneath drooping eyelids keen, dark eyes looked out, as if upon a world in which he had seen nothing except satiety. His forehead was high, his nose aquiline and his whole air one of aristocratic repose. It was a strong face and one to be remembered. I can see it now rising through the mists of memory above those of kings and princes. As the carriage swept by and was lost in the throng of the crowded corso I asked my driver, 'Who was that?' 'The Duke de la ——,' he answered. It was an ancient name, long known in Italy, and I speculated as I drove up and down what that man might have accomplished had he not been born a duke. That night, at the Hotel de France, I remarked that I had seen the duke that day in the Corso, for his strong face was in my mind. The company, two or three of the old Sicilians and an Englishman long resident, laughed, and one said: 'O, yes; as clever a man as you would want to meet, except for his dukedom.'

"'How is that?'

"'Why, he was a poor peasant boy who worked like fits, and finally made a fortune by inventing a new kind of chewing gum. He put his money in railroad contracts and made more. Then he bought the land — estate, and in those days the title went with the estate, so he is a duke, as you see him. The last of the line is ——'s have long since slept in their family sepulcher, but for energy and ability I will snatch this chewing gum man against any one of them that ever lived.'—N. Y. Tribune.

HAVE YOUR TABLE DAINTY.

How to Make the Dining-Room an Attractive Place.

It goes without saying that dainties upon the dining table is regarded as a necessity in every well ordered home. The two or three daily meals are often the only occasions when the entire household gathers together, and the mother knows, that a prettily arranged table is really a powerful factor in forming the characters and habits of her children. Absolute cleanliness is, of course, the first essential. The cloth must be spotless and smoothly laid, the napkins must be neatly folded, and the glass and silver must be beyond reproach. Every good housekeeper nowadays places a pad beneath the tablecloth. This protects the cloth from contact with the table, greatly increasing its durability, and it ensures perfect quiet and an elegant adjustment of the cloth. The use of "table millinery"—that is strips of ribbon, plush or velvet, and other decorations of a similar nature—is no longer approved, so that even at the most elegant dinner the trough of flowers in the center of the table is often the only ornament.

No high dishes or accessories are seen upon the strictly modern table. The silver caster may be very beautiful in itself, but it has had its day. Its place, small pepper and salt "shakes" are distributed at convenient intervals, two of each being sufficient for a family of six, while vinegar is placed in low glass bottles shaped like fancy pitchers, with handles, long, slender necks and large, ornamental glass stoppers. These bottles should not be more than three inches tall. Tall celery glasses are also in disgrace, as are also the silver water pitcher and high vases of flowers and tall flowering plants. The modern table is not disfigured by nuts, which are never really ornamental and are wholly unnecessary if a pad is used and the dishes are not overheated.

Glass carafes are presently used instead of the water pitcher, and add much to the beauty of the table. They are by no means expensive, and those that have rather squat, broad bowls are to be preferred. Perhaps the most popular shape is that which looks as though pressure had been put upon the top and the bowl thereby bulged outward.—Delineator.

Royalty in Space.

There is only one sovereign who has ever been up in a balloon. This is Queen Christina of Spain. Some years ago she happened to pass a field in which some balloons and gas tanks were being made, and it immediately occurred to her majesty that she would like to experience the sensation of being up in midair. After sending her equerry to make the necessary arrangements the royal party ascended and remained in space for some considerable time.—Philadelphia Press.

Their Thoughts.

The Rich Uncle (to his physician)—There is hope for me, then?

Physician—I think so.

The Rich Uncle—Well, please break it gently to my poor nephew.—Life.

"What a beautiful thing is thought," she said; "A boon to be to myself and you. I sit and think; he is thinking of me. And he sits and thinks I am thinking of him."
